

This weekly fanzine created by the people of Ankara who re-claim their own socio-spatial space. A.O.Ç. is reclaimed by the public while opening it up for discussion.

Like what Henri Lefebvre says,

Space is a result of production. ,Therefore, space can be formed / manipulated by the one who produce it. Furthermore, space consists different layers of socio/spatial structure.

In other words;

(when we talk about space, we don't just mean a physical space but we also mean economical, political, cultural space, etc.)

From this point, In this political system, as an authority figure, governments have enough power to impose their ideological views to the layers of space.

“Atatürk Orman Çiftliği” is a (produced) space as well, it has produced by Atatürk as a productive space which later transferred to the public asset according to his will.

However; to the contrary of the purpose of AOÇ; governments have been manipulate it according to their own self-interests. They overtake the public space by implanting their own (authorial) space. this space is dictated from a single center (authorial leader) without any public opinion. It is a space which produced by a over-looking power that does not represent public necessities.

It is a space of extortion. Yet, against to the extortion (authorial space), public figures can also generate their own (public) space without any superior- mind. contrary to the centralist governmental production, “space produced by public” would be a pluralist, reaction-based, accesible and dispossessed entity.

above their function and operability (it is protected or it is not), AOÇ artifacts have got another additional meaning, which can be constructed by getting in touch and experiencing them.

This meaning varies based on the observer's personal identity, in other words, people can read AOÇ through their own personal perspective.

Dialogue between the artifact and the people generates an another “diverse public space” where people can re-claim their own AOÇ.
